ABSTRACT

The research focuses the “Effectiveness of Financial control of North East Provincial Council” during the financial years from 2000 to 2003. The research covers NEPC and endeavor to find out the prevailing effectiveness of financial control in this background.

The prime research objective is evaluating the effectiveness of financial control of NEPC through qualitative and quantitative data collected from multiple references and then recommends some crackdown actions. The research has carried out through some obstacles which were listed under limitations. Literature refers some important books and articles in general management principles and government financial regulation and circulars focuses more depth in public financial management.

The data was mixed in quantitative and qualitative. Data was collected through different sources especially from desktop references, financial statements, observation and structured interview. The quantitative data analyzed by graphs and bar charts and qualitative data which was collected by structured interview and walk through checks, examined through tables and averages.

All the way through the data analysis researcher concludes that the effectiveness of financial control of the NEPC being exercised is not strongly enough.

Some recommendations were suggested for the deficits identified by the researcher through his analysis. Researcher emphasized that more concentration have to be given in preparation of financial budget and provide a considerable structure for financial unit in ministerial level in NEPC.
